

September 21, 2009

Children's museum will open April 24

The News Journal

The Delaware Children's Museum will open April 24 in the former Kahunaville restaurant building on Wilmington's Riverfront, board president Lisa Lessner announced today.

Organizers plan to open with seven strong exhibits, putting construction costs at about $11.5 million.

Museum staff, volunteers and supporters broke ground today - using a symbolic sand box, toy shovels and fun hard hats - in front of the entrance of the former Kahunaville.

The News Journal/JENNIFER CORBETT
Students from Kummba Academy got to shovel in a sandbox instead of having the usual adults do the shoveling for a groundbreaking of the new Delaware Children's Museum today.